ROBBIE OWEN, of PINSENT MASONS, appeared as Parliamentary Agent for the Bill.

(10.00 am)

1. CHRIS SALMON PERCIVAL: Good afternoon. My name is Chris Salmon Percival, Clerk of Private Bills in the House of Lords and welcome to the Examination of the Holocaust Memorial Bill which I am conducting today. Robbie Owen, Parliamentary Agent at Pinsent Masons, the Parliamentary Agent for the Bill, is present.
2. These proceedings are public and a transcript is being taken.
3. The Holocaust Memorial Bill is a hybrid bill and has passed through its stages in the Commons and had a first reading in the Lords. The purpose of this, the so-called Second House Examination, is to ensure that there have been no amendments made in the first House that may further involve standing orders following the first Examination held in April 2023.
4. If I could now invite you, Mr Owen, to take us through the proof in respect of the Bill.
5. ROBBIE OWEN: Thank you and good morning. I, Robbie Owen, parliamentary agent for the Bill state that no amendments were made to the Bill in the House of Commons.
6. CHRIS SALMON PERCIVAL: Thank you, Mr Owen. My finding is that no further standing orders apply to the Bill and that concludes today's Examination. Thank you very much for attending.

The Examination was adjourned at 10.02 am.
