After Clause 59

LORD GRAYLING

“Open access rights: passenger services not provided by Great British Railways

- (1) Subsection (2) applies where –

 - (b) the proposed service, or a substantially similar service, is not currently operated by Great British Railways, or by any person on its behalf.

- (2) Great British Railways must not refuse the application, or fail to enter into an access contract on terms requested by the applicant, unless –
 - (a) Great British Railways publishes a formal declaration that it intends to commence operating a substantially similar passenger service within 12 months of the date of the application, or
 - (b) the Office of Rail and Road certifies that granting the application would create an unacceptable risk to the safe operation of the network.
- (3) Where Great British Railways makes a declaration under subsection (2)(a) but fails to commence the service within the specified 12-month period –
 - (a) the declaration shall cease to have effect, and
 - (b) Great British Railways must immediately grant the access contract to the applicant on the terms originally requested, subject only to any safety directions issued by the Office of Rail and Road.
- (4) For the purposes of this section, a service is “substantially similar” if it serves substantially the same origin and destination stations at similar times of day.”

Member's explanatory statement

This new clause prevents Great British Railways (GBR) from hoarding track capacity. It creates a statutory presumption in favor of private Open Access passenger operators, requiring GBR to grant track access for any route or service that GBR itself does not operate (or plan to operate within 12 months), subject only to essential safety checks by the regulator.

LORD MOYLAN

After Clause 59, insert the following new Clause –

“Open-access rights for passenger services not provided by Great British Railways

- (1) This section applies where –
 - (a) a person (“the applicant”) applies to Great British Railways for access to and use of GBR infrastructure for the purpose of operating a railway passenger service, and
 - (b) the proposed service, or a substantially similar service, is not being provided as a GBR passenger service.

 - (a) the proposed service cannot reasonably be accommodated within the capacity available on GBR infrastructure, having regard to sections 60 to 63,
 - (b) the ORR certifies that granting the application would create an unacceptable risk to the safe operation of the railway, or
 - (c) the conditions in subsection (3) are met.
- (3) The conditions are that –

- (a) Great British Railways has published a declaration that it intends to commence a substantially similar GBR passenger service within 12 months beginning with the date on which the application was made, and

- (4) A declaration under subsection (3)(a) must specify –
 - (a) the proposed route and principal calling points of the service,
 - (b) the proposed frequency of the service, and
 - (c) the date by which the service is expected to commence.
- (5) Where Great British Railways makes a declaration under subsection (3)(a) but does not commence the service within the period specified in that subsection –
 - (a) the declaration ceases to have effect, and
 - (b) Great British Railways must reconsider the application without having regard to any intention on its part to provide the service.
- (6) On reconsidering an application under subsection (5)(b), Great British Railways must grant the application on fair and reasonable terms unless subsection (2)(a) or (b) applies.
- (7) For the purposes of this section, a service is “substantially similar” if it –
 - (a) serves substantially the same origin and destination stations,
 - (b) serves substantially the same passenger market, and
 - (c) is proposed to operate at substantially similar times of day.”

Member's explanatory statement

This amendment would create a presumption in favour of granting access to an independent passenger operator where GBR does not operate a substantially similar service. Access could be refused on capacity or safety grounds, or where GBR has an ORR-approved plan to commence a similar service within 12 months.

Clause 60

LORD MOYLAN

- (6) Before revising the list of strategic freight corridors, Great British Railways must consult —
 - (a) freight operating companies;
 - (b) owners and operators of rail-connected terminals;
 - (c) such other persons as it considers appropriate.”
